Pinot Noir Balf 2015

In the 16th century, Pinot Noir was the most common wine in Sopron. Back then it was the only Hungarian wine that was exported around the globe. This variety has demanded a lot of my attention. As a red wine which sometimes acts like a white wine, this variety makes it clear that this is a wine for special wine drinkers. After ten years of producing Pinot Noir I can say that I am starting to understand this grape. I destem it only partly and let it stay on the skins for a long time. A juicy, fruity wine, easy and chilled like a Jack Johnson song.
